Activity Report (2020)

Stichting Ranking Digital Rights Network (SRDRN) is a non-profit organization registered in The Netherlands as of July 28, 2017.

The purpose of SRDRN is to support the work of a global network of research and advocacy partners who share RDR's mission: to create standards and incentives for tech companies to respect and protect the human rights of internet users.

During 2020, SRDRN continued to focus on raising funds that would enable the hiring of staff and commencement of programmatic activities. Specifically, we:

- Met with representatives of Dutch organizations engaged in human rights benchmarking and digital rights issues;
- Concluded a scoping study to identify opportunities for SRDRN to leverage the research and methodology produced by our U.S.-based partners at New America's Ranking Digital Rights program, to make a useful and effective contribution to European debates on how policymakers can best foster and protect digital rights;
- Sought funding to support European research and advocacy networks dedicated to fostering corporate respect for digital rights along with the government regulations and policies that are consistent with international human rights standards.

SRDRN's top priority for 2021 is to assess the continued viability and justification for pursuing funding to carry out programmatic activities alongside its U.S. counterpart.
